

POMS Doctoral Consortium 2020

POMS 31st Annual Conference, Minneapolis MN, U.S.A.

Saturday, April 25 from 12:30 – 5:30 PM

Room: TBA

The POMS Doctoral Consortium provides a unique opportunity for current PhD students to learn about the academic job market process and what life is like as a faculty member. Attendees will hear from an esteemed group of junior and senior faculty members who will share experiences and tips for successfully navigating these formative years. Attendees will also have an opportunity to network with fellow PhD students who share similar interests. Lunch and break snacks are provided.

Applications from Ph.D. students are now invited. To be considered, please email a single pdf file containing the following information to POMS-PHD@umn.edu by February 28, 2020.

- one-page resume, including contact information, affiliation, and thesis advisor
- one-page non-technical summary of your dissertation title and topic (double space)
- In your submission email, please indicate any food restrictions.

Important: The two-page pdf file should be labeled LastName_FirstName.pdf. For example Jane Little would submit the file Little_Jane.pdf.

Acceptance letters will be sent out by March 6, 2020. There is no additional cost for attending the Doctoral Consortium but all participants must be registered for the POMS conference.

Please note the registration deadlines that apply to the POMS Annual Conference. For presenting authors: February 28, 2020; and for online registration: March 2, 2020.

If you have questions, please contact one of the Co-Chairs of the 2020 Doctoral Consortium:

Professor Karen Donohue (donoh008@umn.edu) or
Associate Professor Susan Goldstein (meyer033@umn.edu)
Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota