

Project Leadership and Society

The sister open access journal of the International Journal of Project Management

ISSN: 2666-7215

Project Leadership and Society

IPMA» international project management association

The Journal of the International Project
Management Association
(IPMA)

Editor-in-Chief:

Prof. Martina Huemann

Vienna University of Economics and Business, Vienna, Austria

Open access

For the full aims and scope, or to submit your paper, visit:

[journals.elsevier.com/
project-leadership-and-society](https://journals.elsevier.com/project-leadership-and-society)

Aims and Scope

Project Leadership and Society (PLS) is an academic and gold open access journal. As a sister open access journal of the International Journal of Project Management, the leading journal in the field of Project Management, PLS opens up for novel approaches that study projects and relate them to society. Society is considered in a broad sense, including policy, leadership and managerial practice.

PLS articles study the interaction between projects, project leadership, project management on the one hand, and economic, social, political and organizational processes, on the other. Project leadership and management are seen in a broad sense including project based management, project-oriented management and Project Management Office (PMO) Management. All papers are expected to yield findings that have implications for policy or practice. We are especially interested in leadership in a project society that includes all types of projects, programs, project portfolios, project-oriented organizations, project networks, project industries. Interesting topics to study projects from a broader perspective include; vertical leadership, shared leadership, change, projectification, resilience, sustainable development, responsibility, career, stakeholder engagement, novel perceptions on value creation and project success. Project leadership and project leaders, teams and individuals in specific situations like crisis, extreme situations, disaster are of interest to the journal. PLS welcomes papers that enhance our understanding of theory and practice of Project Leadership, but also papers on education and novel research practices are welcome to disrupt the development of future project leaders and the way research is organized in a project society.

In our inaugural year we are especially interested in work within the following themes:

- Project leadership and governance
- Contribution of projects and project leadership to solving societal crisis and grand challenges, like Covid 19, climate change
- Project leadership for Sustainable Development, Responsibility
- Teaching and learning: Educating the next generation of project leaders
- Projects and project leadership to create the future
- Digitalisation and datafication in projects
- Next Practice: Practice innovations that disrupt project management and leadership

We are pleased to inform you that Project Leadership and Society will waive the APC (Article Publishing Charge) for any submissions received before 31 December 2021, which are accepted for publication after peer review.

Open access

For the full aims and scope, or to submit your paper, visit:

[journals.elsevier.com/
project-leadership-and-society](https://journals.elsevier.com/project-leadership-and-society)

