

POMS Doctoral Consortium 2021

POMS 32nd Annual Conference

Friday, April 30, 2021: 9:00am – 1:00pm EST

All meetings will be remote online

The POMS Doctoral Consortium provides a unique opportunity for current PhD students to learn about the academic job market process and what life is like as a faculty member. Attendees will hear from an esteemed group of junior and senior faculty members who will share experiences and tips for successfully navigating these formative years. Attendees will also have an opportunity to network with fellow PhD students.

Applications from Ph.D. students are now invited. To be considered, email a single Word or pdf file containing the following information and a separate file of a photo of yourself to:

POMS-PHD@umn.edu by ~~March 31, 2021~~. Application deadline extended to Sunday, April 4.

- one-page resume, including contact information, affiliation, and thesis advisor
- one-page non-technical summary of your dissertation title and topic (double space)
- photo will be included in a summary file of participant names, schools, and emails, to be shared with all participants

For example Jane Singh will name the file: Singh_Jane.pdf

Acceptance letters will be sent via email by April 9, 2021.

There is no additional cost to attend the Doctoral Consortium but participants must register for the POMS conference. We encourage you to submit abstracts (deadline is Feb. 15, 2021) to participate in the conference. The conference abstract is different from the one page document that you submit for participating in the doctoral consortium. Check the POMS conference website for details.

Please note the registration deadline for presenting authors at the POMS Annual Conference: March 22, 2021.

If you have questions, please contact one of the Co-Chairs of the 2021 Doctoral Consortium:

Professor Karen Donohue (donoh008@umn.edu) or
Associate Professor Susan Goldstein (meyer033@umn.edu)
Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota
